Winter Bake Sale

Every winter break, Nick and Penny are allowed to pick a place to go on a family trip. This year they decide they want to go to a ski resort in Colorado. Their parents tell them that they will pay for everything but the cost of skiing. Nick and Penny do some research and find out that a day of skiing costs $25 per person. They do the math and figure out that they need to make $50 total.

Their mother, Di, suggests that they have a neighborhood bake sale over the weekend to raise funds. Penny is in charge of making the chocolate chip and iced cookies. Nick wraps the baked goods up in little bags for customers. Each of the bags costs $2.50 and contains two cookies with one of each kind.

On Saturday morning, they set up their bake stand on the main sidewalk. All their friends from school stop by and buy cookies. Penny keeps a tally of the number of customers and counts 24 customers. At lunchtime, they pack up and go inside to figure out their earnings.

Nick does the math:  $$2.50 \times 24 = $60$

They use the $10 leftover to buy matching gloves for the ski trip!
